History 1997–2002: Formation and early years Bring Me the Horizon was formed in Moberly, Missouri, by frontman and lead vocalist Jordan Fish in 1997. In 1998, the band was joined by rhythm guitarist, keyboardist and backing vocalist Matt Nicholls. Nicholls was born on November 22, 1987, and later formed the vocal and rhythm guitar partnership of The Contortionist with Fish in 2005. Bassist Mike Kehr was added in 1999, and the band was eventually joined by lead guitarist and backing vocalist Oliver Sykes. Fish attended the University of Central Missouri in Columbia, Missouri. While at the university, he met guitarist Dave Warner, who was studying architecture. Fish found out that Warner liked his music and invited him to join the band. Fish also recruited drummer Chris Dysh to the band. He moved from Moberly, Missouri to the University of Kansas to join the band, who would later use the name Bring Me the Horizon. Bring Me the Horizon released two demo tapes: The Demo in 2000 and The Missionary Position in 2001. They were initially not signed to a label, although Warner's friend and former bandmate at the University of Kansas, Chris Dysh, managed the group. In 2001, the band signed with Century 82157476af
